Proposed title of paper: The Many Colors of an Integrated Ethics Program

Abstract with 3 clearly stated objectives in 250 words:

The purpose of traditional ethics committees is to promote ethical practices in the healthcare setting through consultation, education and policy formation. There is a growing need to integrate ethics into the practices of the entire institution with a more comprehensive approach. An Integrated Ethics program fosters an environment that contributes to ethical practice across multiple domains and is recognized as being connected to the day to day business. In order to accomplish these goals, the ethics program must be proactive and prepared to address a diverse spectrum of needs.

The Faculty of the University of Texas M. D. Anderson Cancer Center Section of Integrated Ethics in Cancer Care would like to share with the ethics community the process in which we are engaged as we transition from an ethics committee and consult service to an institution-wide integrated ethics program, expanding upon the programs that already existed.

As M. D. Anderson strives to be the premier cancer center for both patient care and research in the world, so it also endeavors to be the premier leader in cancer care ethics and cancer research ethics by integrating ethics into the intrinsic knowledge base of daily clinical patient care services, ethics consultation, academic research, education, organizational operations, and community outreach through focused interdisciplinary study and practice of ethics. We strive to span all components of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, including regional, national, and international affiliations.
